After divorce, family takes sides

Dear Annie
Annie Lane

Dear Annie: I need to put this out there, even if I'm overreacting and it is not my place. Recently, friends divorced, and some members of my family took different sides. Specifically, I became the ear for the wife to vent to when things got rough, while my sister-in-law, "Rebecca," became the ear for the husband, "Sam," to vent to.

I tried to stay out of the details and just offer encouragement during the rough patch of my friend's life. However, details of Sam's stepping out with other girls came to light.

Rebecca does not think Sam did anything wrong because he said that when he met with these girls, nothing physical ever happened. Rebecca and Sam are constantly hanging out together, and she has killed whatever friendship she had with the wife.

The divorce has been finalized, and there is still tension among all parties involved. Recently, I've noticed that Rebecca has taken a much more active role in her friendship with Sam. I would not care if Rebecca and Sam got together weren't for the fact that she is ma with four kids. She has been conste texting him while ignoring her own ily, despite being told repeatedly her close relationship with Sam been raising questions about whe she is cheating on her husband.

Rebecca has complained about husband working long hours, but moment he had a day off, she left h home with their kids so she could g local date spot with Sam. Thank there was an additional guy fi there.

My worry is that she is going to the same spot as our friends wer cently because her husband will th was too much. Her husband doesn' Sam either. If a fight or divorce is o horizon, she will still be part of our ily because she is my husband's si

Is there anything I can do or s alert her to the dangers that she face, or am I sticking my nose s where it shouldn't belong?

- Concerned and Worried Sister

Dear Concerned and Worried ter: Rebecca is playing with fire, fli with Sam and ignoring her husl Since Rebecca is your husband's s you might ask him to talk to her fc sake of the four kids, if nothing els
